I think it is absurd that the NAB is trying to make this an issue. It is equivalent to ABC trying to get CNN or The Weather Channel taken off cable and satellite. Competition provides the ingenuity that makes the United States great, and limiting it will only succeed in festering the lackluster programming that makes up a large majority of broadcast programming today. As I put my money where my mouth is by paying for my XM service, you would think the NAB would "wake up and smell the roses" by providing more diverse content and try to lure me away from a pay service. Instead they are trying to take away my freedom to choose, which upsets me greatly. I urge the FCC to strike down any attempts to promote unfair trade and regulations. Thank you.
